DEFINING QUALITY IN CALIFORNIA SPARKLING WINE

Iron Horse is a legendary name in the history of American sparkling wine. Started in 1976 by current CEO Joy Sterling's parents in the Green Valley, the westernmost edge of the Russian River Valley, the vineyards were planted in an area at the time thought to be too cool for growing grapes.

The wines disproved that theory from the start, and in the 1980s catapulted to global recognition when an Iron Horse sparkling wine was selected as the toast to peace at the first summit meeting between Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev.

Iron Horse's steadfast dedication to quality is evident through their decisions to produce exclusively vintage-dated sparkling wines, to constantly improve vineyard practices, to implement regenerative agriculture and sustainability initiatives, and to advocate for their community and the environment.

Today this 100% estate-grown, sustainably-farmed, family-owned winery is making the greatest wines in its illustrious history.
